

Careers, Communication and Coffee Seminar Series: Dr. Heejun Choi

organized by:
Desiree Bates, Arrietta Clauss and Heike Hofstetter

In Search of Postdoctoral Positions: Chemists Fit Everywhere

A road to become an independent scientist in research institution involves postdoctoral training. In this seminar, Heejun will share with you his experience and some tips on how to look for postdoctoral opportunities, even at non-academic institutions. He will give many examples of how chemists can fit into any research labs, especially in the field of biology. Heejun Choi is a former graduate student in UW-Madison chemistry department (PhD 2015 Weisshaar). He is currently a postdoctoral researcher at Janelia Research Campus, a research institute solely funded by Howard Hughes Medical Institute (HHMI).

March 10, 2017 at 9:00 in 9341.
Breakfast starting at 8:45 am.

Seminar series funded by the Department of Chemistry. Please send questions or comments to Desiree Bates: dmbates@chem.wisc.edu